

Proposal
Asia Pacific Health Promotion Capacity Building Forum
and The 1st APACPH Taiwan Regional Conference
-Empowering Health Promotion Worker for Healthy Society-

1. Background

APACPH is a consortium of schools in the fields of medicine and public health, aiming to build the academic capacity of its members and contribute to the state of health and well-being in the Asia-Pacific region. The Regional Office in Taiwan is one of the ten regional offices of APACPH, which actively work to promote public health academic and research in the region.

Mitigating the burden of widespread problems such as non-communicable diseases (NCDs) and aging populations, requires collective action, regional cooperation, and experience exchange. In order to advocate and promote a healthy lifestyle, Taipei Medical University (TMU) then proposes to establish a “Collaborating Center for Health Promotion” (hereafter as CCHP) within the APACPH since August 2017, aiming at coordinating members’ expertise and resources to advance a health promotion agenda. In detail, the Center will articulate evidence-based practices and policy options, providing the member countries with technical support and training opportunities. We need to consider other factors beyond just evidence such as population characteristics, environmental and organizational context, resources, etc. to make informed decisions. The CCHP will focus on those challenges that hinder healthy lifestyle promotion in the Asia-Pacific region, particularly in terms of capacity building and leadership.

Therefore, TMU will host the 3-day Asia Pacific Health Promotion Capacity Building Forum with interdisciplinary and multi-sectoral collaboration in partnership with APACPH. In terms of health promotion capacity building, it is our goal to update and share public and global health knowledge, policy, services and best practice within the Asia Pacific Region.

Thus, APACPH support for this conference is essential for the new potential members from Taiwan. With APACPH support, this conference can grant current members of APACPH new opportunities to work together, build regional academic and research capacities, and help discuss the significant public health issues associated with health promotion capacity building in this region.

2. Objectives

- A. To update and share public / global health knowledge, policy, services and best practice among APACPH members in the Asia Pacific Region
- B. To establish a network for APACPH members and to create a platform for capacity building
- C. To strengthen public health academic and research collaboration among APACPH member
- D. To enhance professionalism and research competence of health promotion workforce in APACPH countries

3. Target participants

10-12 public health scholars and officers from APACPH countries, 80 Taiwanese public health officers, researchers and health professionals

4. Activities

- A. 7 September 2017: Pre-conference site visiting in public health administration in Taipei
- B. 8 September 2017: Asia Pacific Health Promotion Capacity Building Forum
- C. 9 September 2017: Site visiting and business meetings

5. Location and Partners
